

For Congress, General J. Kent Hamilton

For two terms the Ninth District with a normal Republican plurality of several thousand, has been represented by a Democrat. Factional quarrels in the Republican ranks, inability of the candidates to heal political wounds and an indifference on the part of Republican voters who felt ever in mind the fact that the party had an overwhelming majority in congress and concluded from this that the loss of a district or two wouldn't matter—these were the prime causes leading to the election of a Democrat.

But the time for indifference has passed. The Republican party today is face to face with the serious problem of keeping control of the house. The most optimistic leaders admit that there are going to be a great many changes this fall, and if we are still in the majority, the margin will be a small one. Indeed, it is not inconceivable that the result may hinge on the issue in the Ninth district.

It is incumbent therefore on the Republicans to nominate a man who will hold the party together and draw recruits from the opposition—a man who, because of the confidence he has inspired, will arouse the people to a vigorous campaign in his behalf. That kind of a man must be chosen from the ranks of those who have done things and whose works speak for themselves. In a crisis like the present, we must draft the tried and true, if we would make victory certain.

Largely because of the pressing nature of party affairs, friends of Gen. J. Kent Hamilton of Toledo, urged him into the race. He has a record as a Republican leader and adviser that requires no apology. He has been an active supporter of Republican principles almost from the birth of the party. He was on the field in battle fighting for the union and against slavery before many of the present voters were born. He participated in the thrilling campaigns that followed the war, and worked in harmony with Republican leaders to solve the huge problems of reconstruction, redemption and revenue.

But although a party man in the broad sense, Gen. Hamilton never subordinated public service to partisan advantage. He was one of the best mayors Toledo ever had, because he possessed common sense and gave the city a business administration. He was a success as city solicitor, because he devoted his efforts to the legal affairs of the municipality. Later he gave freely of his time and counsel that the sinking fund commission and other public service institutions be placed on solid footing. In all these activities he performed his duties with an eye to the common welfare, apparently unmindful of the fact that he was sacrificing his personal interests.

His war record indicated his later career. He fought bravely as long as there was fighting to be done. He was with Steedman at Chickamauga and afterwards tramped with Sherman's troops from Knoxville through to Atlanta, taking part in all the bat-ties that, had for their object the capture of the Georgia stronghold. At Chickamauga he was personally complimented for gallantry on the field of battle by his brigade and division commanders, and later he gave an equally good account of himself in the engagements at Resaca, New Hope church, Mission Ridge and others forming the history of that memorable campaign. He followed Sherman to Savannah, thence northward to Goldsboro, where Joe Johnston was finally conquered, participating meanwhile in the battles of Bentonville and Averysboro.

Returning from the scene of strife, Captain Hamilton located in Toledo, where he rose very rapidly in the esteem of his fellowmen as a lawyer and a citizen. Soon thereafter he was chosen police prosecutor and through successive promotions elevated to the mayoralty of the city.

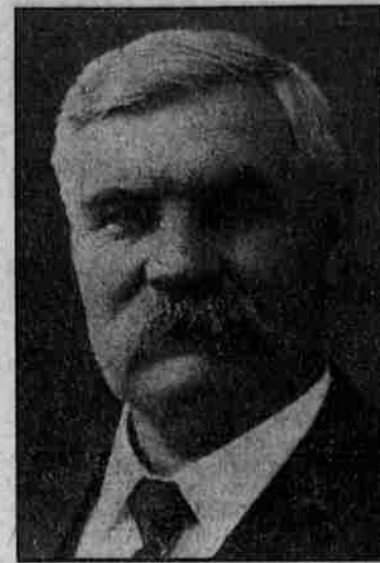

But it is not possible in this brief biography to recount all the activities of Kent Hamilton. The purpose rather is to show that in his political career, he possessed the confidence of the community in which he lived and never betrayed it. Called upon to perform public service he performed it in a manner that always redounded to his credit.

Personal ambition and selfish interest have never worked in him to a degree where he could lose sight of the moral responsibilities thrust upon him by a confiding people.

It is the men who know him best that are working hardest today to secure for him the Republican nomination for congress.

WHAT LITTLE THINGS DO.

Little drops of water poured into the milk gives the milkman's daughter lovely gowns of silk. Little grains of sugar mingled with the sand make the grocer's assets swell to beat the band. Little bowls of custard, hunble though they seem, help enrich the fellow selling pure ice cream.

Little rocks and boulders, little chunks of slate, make the coalman's fortune something very great. Little ads well written, printed nice and neat, give the joyful merchants home on Easy street.

E. L. LOOMIS

For County Commissioner

Republicans should remember that E. L. Loomis is the only candidate for re-election to the office of commissioner in the county this fall.

To elect an entire new board of commissioners at this time could hardly be otherwise than detrimental to the taxpayers of the county even though they all should be good men. Mr. Loomis is busy every day about the interests of the county and would not be justified in neglecting his duties to make a canvass if this was needed on his part. He has proven himself a careful and trustworthy official in every instance. He has been in office less than eight months and should be elected for a second term as he will be unless the Republican voters at the primaries overlook the fact that he is a candidate.

Your vote and influence is solicited.
